

SHAVED ANGELS: Jason Shield, Richard Spurrell and Michael Hobday from Max Employment.

Doing the Max to help

SHANNON SAGAIDAK
sagaidaks@qst.news1td.com.au

THE Ipswich Flood Appeal can add $74,000 to its coffers, thanks to a donation from Max Employment.

Three of the company's top executive managers shaved their heads to raise funds with the help of employees from more than 70 Max Employment offices around the country.

The funds raised were matched dollar for dollar by the company, which also chose to hold its annual business managers conference in Ipswich last week to help boost the local economy.

Ipswich business manager Ami Geertsma said more than 100 delegates attended the conference.

Seven of the company's Queensland offices, including its Ipswich and Goodna sites, were directly affected by the floods.

Managing director Michael Hobday said he was proud of the "brilliant, special people" who supported the flood appeal.

"We value being a part of the Ipswich community," he said.

"The staff are all local and were affected by the floods.

"In Goodna we set up a community relief centre in our carpark, which was a huge commitment and a great success."