

News → Local News → News → General → Jobs on Christmas wish list

Jobs on Christmas wish list

16 Nov, 2011 01:00 AM

THERE are some people who have one simple wish this Christmas: to get a job.

Jobs services provider MAX Employment launched its Great Australian Christmas Jobs Drive at Ingleburn recently.

MAX Employment staff and volunteers held a barbecue at Memorial Oval and encouraged local employers to provide job opportunities for unemployed people in the lead-up to Christmas and throughout 2012.

MAX Employment will contribute to the Smith Family Christmas Appeal for every job-seeker placed into sustainable employment.

MAX NetWork managing director Michael Hobday said: "Christmas is a time when not having a job can impact hard on Australians and their families, so its also designed to inspire job-seekers, employers and the community to work together to create sustainable employment outcomes going into 2012.

"For many Australians there would be no better gift than a gift of a job this Christmas."

Details: Phone MAX Employment on 1800 625 350 to be part of the campaign or pledge a vacancy at maxemployment.com.au/jobsdrive.

Helping hand: MAX Employment staff and volunteers Trish Pollard, Patrick Pollard, Kirsty Somes, Steve Hedge and Siobhan Oliver (pictured) held a free sausage sizzle at Memorial Oval to promote a new campaign. Picture: Luke Fuda

